A FEVER SCARE AMONG CATTLEMEN.

Azimals from Texas Exhibit Symptoms of Disease Shortly After Their Arrival. There is a Texas fever scare among the cattle dealers in this city. The fever is a splenetic disease which is prevalent among the cattle in the Southwest. These suffer from it during the hot months from two and a half to four days. It is said that the disease rapidly among Northern cattle.

The present scare arose when a consign ment of cattle arrived from the South a few days ago at the Sixtieth street stock yards. Cattle coming from this district are closely watched, and should they look suspicious they are quarantined before they cross an imag-inary line drawn by the Government from mary line drawn by the Government from east to west.

This consignment crossed the line. When they had been quartered in the yards with cattle from the northern district it was noticed that some looked suspicious. As soon as the Bureau of Animal Industry, whose officials are actively employed in the different abattors and stock yards, heard of this the Texas cattle were cut out from the others and placed in a yard by themselves. The officials are now watching them to see if the fever develops.
